Dear “Potential Donor”

Trauma is a burden that many Americans carry silently. In fact, according to the National Center for PTSD. Approximately 60% of men have experienced at least one traumatic event in their lives – most of which come from combat, disaster, or physical assault. Women are a close second place, with approximately 50% experiencing trauma, but more so in the form of sexual assault and childhood sexual abuse.

Yes, more than half of the people you pass by in a day have seen unimaginable darkness. Odds are, you have also had a time in your life you’d rather not remember. But the past is the past, right?

Not so fast.

No matter how much we would like to turn a blind eye to the traumatic events our neighbors and ourselves have faced, the repercussions of these events can last a lifetime if not handled properly.

In fact, individuals who have Post-Traumatic Stress Disorder are three times as likely to develop an addiction, according to American Addiction Centers.

The urge to numb the pain of the past with alcohol and drugs is a slippery slope that, for many, can be deadly. That is where Oasis Clinical Care Management is stepping in, and we are asking you to join us as we help our friends and neighbors pull themselves out of the darkness and back into the light.
